

COMPUTER NETWORK ADMINISTRATION AND SECURITY MANAGEMENT

Computer Network Administration and Security Management prepares individuals for employment in the computer/information technology field in such areas as network administrator and security management administrator. The curriculum is intended to help students develop skills to design, administer and manage the heterogeneous corporate network with security emphasis. The courses examine and illustrate network security with various industry-leading network operating systems. Individual courses will assist students in preparing for related industry certification exams.

Select options in left navigation for information about individual programs.
CIS Program Website (<http://www.mtsac.edu/cis/>)